ЗАДАНИЕ 8

Für Elise is more recognized classical music. It is beautiful and pleasant. Music like that can make people feel peaceful or other strong feelings. Everybody has his own <sup>music</sup> taste ~~in~~ but classical music likes many people. Most people <sup>50</sup> know only Für Elise and this is not rare. Other classical musics are great too. I listen this genre of music, I have it in my playlist. I listen it before I'll go to sleep. Also I can play Für Elise on guitar and not only it. I think classical music can make people feel strong feelings at the theatre. It's more emotional <sup>100</sup> when the music use to show dramatical moments or sadness. If you don't like music like that, I'm sure that you will have emotions ~~in~~ listening it at the theatre.

ЗАДАНИЕ 8 The diagram shows the result of a research which goal was to find out what pieces of classical music people recognize.

According to the diagram, the most easily-recognizable melody is "Für Elise". "Ode to Joy" turned out to be the second best-known melody. The amount of people that recognized it is just 6 percents less than the amount of people that are familiar with "Für Elise". But the most surprising fact in my opinion is that only four percents of the respondents could recognize such a popular melody as "Flight of the Bumblebee".

Nowadays people are not really familiar with classical music due to few reasons. Firstly, before the XX century the variety of music genres wasn't that wide. These days people prefer pop music, and the classical music seems too boring for them because it lacks crazy beats or catching lyrics. Moreover, people rarely go to plays and operas now, so many of them have only heard classical melodies in TV ads or films. I think the solution of this problem can be popularizing classical music to let people understand its beauty. There should be more open lectures about music history or modernized plays.

In conclusion I would like to mention the importance of classical music in our lives. It's a big part of the world's culture. Besides, it's a perfect example to learn about music harmony and the ways of interpreting feelings in art.

ЗАДАНИЕ 8

My project which I am currently working on is at finding out what pieces of classical music people in Zetland can recognize when they hear them. I have found some data on this issue and in this essay I am going to comment on the findings and express my opinion.

Overall, as it can be seen from the pie chart the majority of the polled recognize "Für Elise" (36%). ~~Being chosen by 30%~~ Another fact is that 30% of Zetlanders know such piece of <sup>classical music</sup> as "Ode to Joy". Also, 15% of Zetlanders chose "Plair de lune".

The difference can be seen between the number of <sup>the 100</sup> surveyed who chose "Wedding March" and those who selected "Flight of Bumblebees" (28% and 4% respectively). The former is more recognizable because it is a ~~very popular~~ common occurrence on weddings ~~it is~~ <sup>to play this music.</sup> a ~~symbol of it.~~

Having given some thought to the topic, I can outline a significant problem. In modern world <sup>100</sup> not many people prefer classical music over such genres as pop and rap, but people should never forget legends of music such as Bach, Mozart etc.

To conclude, I think that classical music is important in our life. It can help people to develop a sense of beauty or simply enjoy a beautiful melody and share <sup>100</sup> their hobby with relatives and friends. 11

ЗАДАНИЕ 8

A survey in Zealand revealed interesting insights about the recognition of classical music pieces. With "Für Elise" recognized by 36% and "Ode to Joy" by 30% of respondents, while "Wedding march" enjoyed a significant 28% recognition rate, it lagged slightly behind "Ode to Joy".

I think the data suggest that, while <sup>50</sup> some classical pieces are ~~well~~ well-known, a lack of familiarity exists with others, even those frequently used in popular contexts like weddings.

Despite the enduring nature of classical music, it tends to be less appreciated by teenagers, which may hinder their emotional development. This issue could be addressed by implementing <sup>100</sup> mandatory music classes in high schools and creating television advertisements featuring celebrities enjoying classical music. Such initiatives would inspire younger audiences to develop an appreciation for it.

In summary, I believe that listening to classical music is crucial due to its soothing effects, which can alleviate anxiety and assist <sup>150</sup> individuals in managing stress. By fostering an appreciation for classical music, especially among younger generation development and overall well-being. Initiatives like mandatory music classes and engaging advertising campaigns could bridge the gap between classical music and today's youth, encouraging them to explore its rich heritage.
